street. Open day and night, THE HOOSIER METROPOLIS.-The HERALD. in common with all good citizens who take a take a pride in the many evidences of prosperity that mark the present aspect of affairs in Indianapolis, and are full of promise for a more glorious future, cannot allow the occasion of Its donning a new dress to pass without speaking its mind about the city whose interests it shall be its highest object to advocate, and in whose future it will share a common prosperito strong manhood, when it is difficult with | with great interest, absolute certainty to define his status, for he is neither a boy nor a man, but partly the one and partly the other. He is a man in embryo hood, youth, maturity and decadence. Indian. The public are invited to be in attendance. apolis has passed through the first two phases of its existence. It was once a village; it is so no longer. It was once a country town, but it has passed through that era, and gone beyond it. It is now a city, with all the adventagesthat mark a city. It is not an overgrown

with all the evidences-with all the conditions town, aping the manners and habits of a city, but a de facto city. It is not a hybrid, or a cross between a town and a city, but it is a city, pure and simple, integral, fixed, perfect. Three score thousand people have a home within its limits. Every profession and every ton Saturday for the purpose of receiving the ed and honored wherever that science which elect to remain in the service or be mustered a dwelling place. Here, too, is Superintendent, Hon. Samuel L. Rugg, than rare administrative capacity with extensive lie and select schools are here in profusion, and in such a degree of excellence as to warrant the fact that the interests of the rising generation are not being neglected. Then we have our public buildings for humane and benevolent purposes-the Institutions for the blind, the deaf and dumb, the orphars and the insane-not less so be praised for their architecrailroad center Indianapolis is unrivalled. Nine railroads center here, putting us in communication with every quarter of our country. | moved Our Post Office building is not less to be spoken of for its imposing appearance as a whole, than for the perfection of its details. The street railroads of the city are, comparatively, more extensive than in any other city in the United States, and are noted for their elegant cars and smooth and substantial lines. Nor are their enterprise or their accommodation. In respect to newspapers, the great disseminators of information, Indianapolis is fully up with the progressive spirit of the time. It boasts of the Herald and Journal, and numberless other dailies, weeklies and monthly journals,-political, educational, ecclesiastical and agricultural. In respect to amusements, we have the Metropolitan Theatre and the Museum, by which our people and the stranger who visits the city can be treated to a legitimate evening's entertainment. An extensive "Masonic Temple and Opera House" is in process of erection, which, when completed, will rival any establishment of the kind in the West. We have not space to mention other and smaller establishments under this head. We have more than a dozen banks. with an aggregate capital of many millions. An extensive wholesale trade is done by our merchants all over the West, North and South. and to a considerable extent Eastward. We facilitating the convenience of the traveler in a manner unequaled by any other city we know of. We have our wide streets, spoken of for their beauty by all visitors from abroad. We have our fine residences and our public grounds. We have our numberless wholesale and retail houses in every department of busi ness. We have our Insurance Companies home and foreign. We have our Telegraph Companies-the "Western Union" and "Un ted States"-our hotels and our churches. W. have White river flowing hard by the city, whose susceptibility of navigation has lately been demonstrated by the Indianapolis and White River Steamboat Company; and finally, we have various other features too numerous to mention here, all of which go to prove Indi anapolis a city, and all of which indicate clearly her coming glory and prosperity. The day of its fullest prosperity is a long way in the future, and as for its "decadence," a long way off may it be, and to the future chronicler do we leave the unpleasant task. The HERALD has no heart for such a theme, and " sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."
